CANYON ROAD: ABOUT THE WINEMAKER

Rafael Jacinto

By the age of 18, Rafael Jacinto Jofre knew that his true passion in life would be winemaking. Born in Mendoza, Argentina into a Spanish and Argentinean family, it only took a few months of shadowing a winemaker at Bodegas Norton in Argentina to spark an interest that would last a lifetime.

In order to perfect his one great passion, Rafael began studying winemaking at Argentina's University Don Bosco, where he earned a Bachelor of Arts in Oenology. By 2002, he had already worked for several wineries, including Chandon Argentina, Nieto Senetiner and Vina Leyda in Chile.

In 2004, Rafael brought his winemaking experience stateside when he decided to embark on the opportunity to be a winemaker at Canyon Road Winery, where he now focuses on crafting wine made with his passion, love, and care. He takes pride in following the grapes while growing on the vines, tasting them during ripening and evaluating their flavors until they are optimal. This ensures that the most expressive wines are crafted.

“After 10 years of winemaking and 15 harvests around the world, I have realized that nothing makes me happier than bringing joy and happiness to my friends and family through a glass of wine,” says Rafael. “To see their smiles and hear their laughs while sharing a good meal enjoying my wine feels so incredibly good. There is no other feeling like it!”
